Consider the following examples of OMNI PayPhone scenario

Imagine a taxi driver who has picked up a fare (passenger) who has just arrived in Barcelona airport from overseas, say Hong Kong. The driver asks if the passenger has had a good flight etc. and then mentions that he/she can use OMNI to make a call back home to speak with his loved one/ones in Hong Kong (to say that he has arrived safely etc.) at an incredible low rate of US$0.275/minute. At such low affordable rates, the passenger would most likely want to make more than one call and speak for longer than 30 minutes.

When the customer has completed making the call/calls, the taxi driver would send a signal from the OMNI handset to EcoCarrier to request for the accounting for the calls made and EcoCarrier will return with a message forthwith containing the following data:

total number of calls made total number of minutes
total amount of charges

The taxi driver has a profit margin of 20% off the rates charged to the customer (end user) and you as the master reseller make 10% of the rates charged to customer.

It is a very good deal for all concerned.

It is a win (end user)-win (taxi-driver)-win (you the master reseller)-win (EcoCarrier) proposition.

You do not have to pay for overhead expenditures that are due to rent for a shop space or employee salary.

The taxi driver can also offer OMNI Payphone service outside his taxi, say in the arrival concourse of the airport if it is a better way of getting the business.

IT IS AN OMNI PAYPHONE and A MOBILE CALLSHOP.

Imagine too, an enterprising hotel bell boy or a hotel guest desk personnel or a hotel gift shop keeper being able to offer hotel guests the OMNI service to make international calls without paying for the roaming charges.

And a specially enterprising beach boy or a waiter of a resort hotel that caters to foreigners being able to offer the convenience and incredible low rates of OMNI service to the sun tanners on the beach to make international calls.

And clever business persons setting up OMNI Payphone service in international tradeshows venues to offer individual attendees or exhibitors the convenience and the great savings in making international calls – important business calls that are likely to be many minutes per call. Each customer can take OMNI handset with him/her to a part of the venue for privacy and away from noises to make calls and talk. Call accounting is made after the customer has made all the calls that he/she wants to make.
